

Dos and Don'ts for applying for the 2023 Bernard J. Tyson National Award for Excellence in Pursuit of Healthcare Equity

Thinking about applying for the 2023 Bernard J. Tyson National Award for Excellence in Pursuit of Healthcare Equity? Here are some helpful dos and don'ts on how to make sure your application is submitted correctly!

NOTE: An application only will be considered if the lead organization directly delivers healthcare. If a group of organizations or a collaborative is applying, it can include nonclinical partners.

DO

Submit applications that describe efforts that:

- Addressed specific disparities in care processes or outcomes.
- Implemented a well-defined intervention.
- Found measurable, sustained reductions in the specific disparity.

Register for an account on the award platform to start your application:

- Provide first and last name and email address.
- Verify email address.

Include the following information:

- Submitter's name and contact information.
- Leadership-level name (such as a CEO or executive director) and contact information.
- Organization's name.
- Physical address and website address.

Remember you have a 7-page limit for supplemental documents including tables, figures, or graphic representations of your initiative. Applicants must reference each figure or table within their written responses to link the information.

DON'T

Submit an application that did not achieve measurable effects on care processes or outcomes. Applications that do not demonstrate an improvement in at least one disparity will not be considered.

Hit the submit button without double checking your responses! There is a character limit for each question in the application and an automated counter. Responses over the character limit will be truncated.

Forget to include a biosketch for the lead of the initiative. This can be a maximum of 2 pages.

What does measurable improvement mean?

- Baseline data that shows the initiative's starting point.
- The ability to explain the intervention that was used, as well as how it was innovative or novel.
- Improvement metrics that track the initiative's effects on the targeted vulnerable population. These targeted populations include race or ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, and socioeconomic status.
- Evidence (results tables, statistical tests, run charts, and other quantitative methods) that shows how the improvement was achieved and sustained.

One of the goals of the Tyson Award is to inspire other organizations. By applying, we hope to share your best practices and improvement strategies — in part or in full — to carry these lessons forward.

Get familiar with the application by checking out an application example on The Joint Commission's website at <https://www.jointcommission.org/resources/awards/the-bernard-tyson-award-for-excellence-in-pursuit-of-healthcare-equity/>.